99.92%

RAW COVERAGE

99.99%

OF REAL PRODUCTS

45 target URLs were not captured. 44 are not real products — their pages 301-redirect to a category or home page (verified by clicking). The remaining 1 is a real product whose page carries no structured product data (a multi-pack assortment page), so it can't be parsed automatically. Of the 7 genuinely-reachable products flagged in the final pass, 6 were recovered on a fresh-IP retry. Coverage of real, parseable, on-sale products is effectively $\approx 100\%$ ($58,605 / 58,606$).

The 7 flagged products — final status

#	PRODUCT	SKU	SHOP	STATUS
1	P	190689	AT	✓ recovered
2	P	252549	IE	🕒 loads, no product data (assortment)
3	P	253700	NL	✓ recovered
4	P	225099	NL	✓ recovered
5	P	222048	NL	✓ recovered
6	P	235151	NL	✓ recovered

Method & recovery

Coverage was measured by diffing every captured product URL against the full discovered target list (product_urls_all.txt, 58,650 URLs), which left 51 uncaptured. Each of the 51 was opened by hand to classify it: 44 redirect to a non-product page (removed), 7 were genuine, reachable products. A dedicated retry lane on a fresh Tor exit — with the free vision-AI doodle-captcha solver enabled — then re-scraped the 7 and recovered 6 (one captcha auto-solved on the first attempt). The 7th is a multi-pack “assortment” listing that returns no structured product data, so it cannot be parsed. Net captured: 58,605 product pages = 100% of real, parseable, on-sale products.

Generated from the live scrape output (products_fleet*.ndjson) diffed against the discovered target list (product_urls_all.txt, 58,650 URLs).
 "Removed" = the URL redirects away from a /p/<sku> product page. Scrape run with hydrascrape (patchright + rotating Tor). Report date 2026-06-06.
